MILOS, GREECE JENI CARUANA

Join me, Jeni Caruana, on the beautiful island of Milos in the Aegean Sea on the eastern side of Greece.

Our host, Adriano will pick us up at Milos Airport and drive us to the studios.

We will be staying in charming little studio apartments nestled side-by-side, most of the houses are a pristine white with blue shutters and doors.

We will settle into our rooms and then meet to be introduced to all the staff and talk about the programme.

On Milos we will paint and swim at lovely beaches surrounded by trees and goats. The island is known for its honey, and the local feta cheese is exceptional.

As all my students know, I like to encourage everyone to achieve the best results they can in their own way. I don't expect anyone to copy me or my methods; I would rather inspire and guide so that everyone feels confident to follow their own path. I want to show you a new way of looking at the world and your unique talents.

Everyone is different, so I tend to structure sessions with a theme in mind but in a flexible way. For example, a class on perspective could cover the very basics for those who need it, but also loosen up the too-tighters by using sticks or other odd tools! I teach in a responsive way, so everyone has individual attention and mini-workshops as and when needed.

Rather than set out a daily itinerary I would rather take each day as it comes and consider the weather and what the group feels they would like to do that day. We will work on site for the morning. Afternoons will be free for rest, relaxation, swimming, exploration, shopping or more painting.

In the evenings we will eat meals at nearby tavernas.
